Body found burned in buffer zone

BY GEOFF BELCHER News Editor

Investigators from the Hancock County Sheriff's Department are still trying to determine the identity of a woman who was found dead Saturday in the NASA buffer zone. Sheriff Steve Garber said that the woman's body was discovered at about 4:30 p.m. Saturday, just off Hwy 607, about three miles north of the back gate at Stennis Space Center, near the old Santa Rosa community. She was found by a member of a family which was out target practicing.

"The body appears to have been at this location about one week," Garber said. Someone had piled debris on the body, apparently poured diesel fuel on the debris and set it on fire.

The woman's body was burned beyond recognition, he said, but an autopsy indicates she was a white female, between the ages of 35 and 45 years old. She was approximately 5'2" tall, with a slender to petite build, Garber said, and wore a yellow metal band ring on the fourth

Storm looms over beach parking lot

Political squabbles appear to be muddying Tidelands distribution

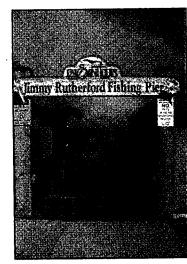

BY MARY G. SEILEY Staff Writer

Groups representing hundreds of Bay St. Louis residents are wired up over a May 19 City Council gathering concerning future improvements to the Jimmy Rutherford Pier.

And at the same time, some area officials are even more wired up over how the public financing for any projects meandered a mysterious path through the Legislature. A web of political intrigue shrouds the matter, somewhat muddying the waters of the Tidelands Trust Fund appropriations for fiscal 2004.

In all, state legislators earmarked $650,000 for upgrades to three Bay-Waveland piers and the Pass Christian Harbor, and another $100,000 to construct a building at McLeod Water Park. The bill earmarked a total of some $5.8 million for coastal projects.

Casino Magic hosts Coast development conference

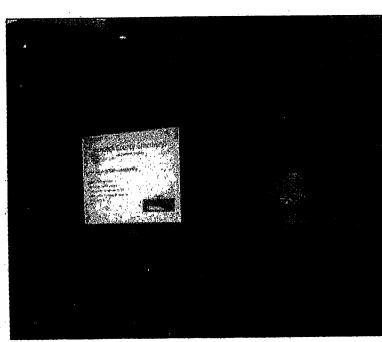

BY BENNIE SHALLBETTER Staff Writer The Department of Marine

Resources and the Comprehensive Resource Management Plan hosted the fourth annual Coastal Development Strategies Conference at Casino Magic this week. The conference brought together local, regional and national experts to speak for two days on a broad array of subjects pertinent to our coastal environment in relation to our local economy.

About 250 people registered for the conference which was kicked off with a golf tournament at the Bridges on Monday afternoon. Keynote speakers were commentator/writer Douglas Brinkley and Andrew J. Reese, professor and vice-president of AMEC Earth and Environmental, Inc.

"Pioneers are famous for being found face down on the prairie with arrows in their back," said Reese,

Investig

Scientists offer new invention to Southern Regional board members

BY BENNIE SHALLBETTER Staff Writer

Will an innovative new technology for sewer treatment make its way to County? Hancock Researchers from Louisiana Southern University and representatives from two environmental companies who work with the university to market the new equipment presented their ideas to the board of Southern Wastewater Regional Management District on Tuesday.

Highlights of the equipment include individual units that pre-treat munici-tion, presenters said.

These units can be used to substantially reduce or eliminate not only typical household waste, but excessive grease from restaurant waste, oil or gasoline spills from business waste, hospital waste and many other specialized waste products.

The result is that the central plant has improved capacity and predictability said the presenters.

big difference The between this and a typical septic system is that there is no guess work, said researcher Dr. Ralph Portier. The units treat the pal wastewater before it water to such a degree that reaches the wastewater it really does not have to go plant, using microbes to on to the plant and the goal eliminate the need for large central treatment plants.

In the mean time, presenters showed the board a concept of what they called reactors, much like those used to treat industrial hazardous waste, but tailored to municipal waste. The technology has been used in the hazardous waste industry for the past ten years or more. The technology has been under study for about 22 years.

Basically, the reactors use a system of filter layers of microbes specific to the contaminates which need to be removed. Because the system treats with a higher efficiency, it also reduces the amount of sludge generated degrade organic contamina- and move to the future is to at a plant; said presenters, eventually eliminating the need for land farming.

To use the equipment takes no special setup, said presenters. All you need is electricity, which runs a pump, which provides the system with needed oxygen. Some maintenance is also required said Portier. At present Charleston and Hilton Head, S.C., and several locations in Florida are piloting the equipment at the municipal level.

A little lot could mean less house for contractor's son

BY BENNIE SHALLBETTER Staff Writer

Most of the excitement at last week's Waveland workshop revolved around a planning and zoning decision to deny a request for a variance by developer Rodney Corr to build a second home on a lot he proposed to subdivide.

The lot measures 75 X 220 and spans from one street to the next. He wanted to build a 1,600 ft. home on the back portion of the lot for his son. Neighbors said the plans violated a maximum square footage zoning ordinance for that size lot.

Corr presented his plans for the house to aldermen anyway, adding that if they would not allow him to build the house he wanted, then he would build a small 825 square foot "mother-inlaw" cottage on the back portion of the lot.

"The cottage would not fit into the neighborhood as well as the house," Corr said, "but my son needs a place to live.

Corr also spoke about property taxes and utility service.

Corr's remarks angered neighbors who accused him of threatening both them and aldermen in an attempt to "get his way."

One neighbor said that she had been to meetings on three separate occasions regarding variance requests on Corr's property. She said she would like to see the matter settled once and for all, but aldermen said that as long as the requests changed they could not deny Corr's right to make them.

Corr would also have to request an approval from planning and zoning to build the cottage, as aldermen voted to uphold the planning and zoning recommendation to deny his request to build the house.

In other business:

• Aldermen voted to adopt a new ordinance governing transient and mobile vendors. Apparently the City of Waveland maintained an old ordinance banning the practice of transient and mobile vendors in the city. It recently came to light that the ordinance violated constitutional rights to travel and earn a living, said Mayor Tommy Longo, requiring the city to rescind the old ordinance and adopt a new one. Aldermen voted to pass a new ordinance which would require vendors to obtain a $350 yearly sales permit and another $350 use permit for each vehicle employed in their business. Basically the Avon lady would have to pay $700 a year to deliver your order to your house if you live in the city. If she walks over the order, she would only be required to purchase the $350 permit.

• CSX should begin repairs to the area around Nicholson Ave. within 30 days. The intersection was the scene of a train derailment last fall.

• Detective Roland Hymel was given permission to hold his annual beach blow-out on June 7, and close Lakeview Rd. from Noon to 5 p.m.

Alleged robber drops driver's license

BY GEOFF BELCHER News Editor

An Alabama man left his driver's license behind Tuesday after allegedly robbing the Todd's Chevron at 1-10 near Kiln.

Investigator Rita Blaize-Watson of the Hancock Sheriff's Department said yesterday that authorities are looking for Jeffery Dale Boomhower, 34, who allegedly went into the store and took an undisclosed amount of cash.

"A customer tried to assist (the store clerk) and grabbed the suspect's shirt as he ran past," Blaize-Watson said, "and it appears that when that happened, the man's Alabama driver's license fell out."

The clerk positively identified the photo on the driver's license as the alleged robber, she said.

The suspect left the scene in an older model white

Ford Mustang with a cloth convertible top and missing its back window, Blaize-Watson said. He drove north on Hwy. 603; with a blonde female passenger.

Chief Investigator Bob Lambert said yesterday that Boomhower has an extensive criminal record. including numerous arrests in Alabama, Georgia and Florida dating back to 1990, and including such charges as burglary, theft, narcotics possession, robbery, strongarm robbery, parole violation, aggravated battery and aggravated assault on a police officer.

Boomhower apparently being investigated by authorities in St. Tammany Parish for a robbery there similar to the incident at Todd's Chevron. In the St. Tammany case, Blaize-Watson said, "the stor cler was sprayed severely with mace."

BY GEOFF BELCHER News Editor

Police on Tuesday arrested a Bay St. Louis man who is suspeced of a string of burglaries in both the Bay and Waveland.

Adrian Saucier of 430 Labat St., Bay St. Louis, age 39, was charged Tuesday on three counts of burglary of a commercial building, according to Tom Burleson. chief of detectives for the Bay St. Louis Police Department.

"There were a total of 11 burglaries that we are Burleson investigating," said Tuesday, "where it is suspected that the same individual is responsible for all of them."

The charges levied against Saucier on Tuesday include the March 3 burglary at Goodwill Industries; April 10 burglary at Evergreen Nursery; and April 11 break-in at Our Lady of the Gulf Catholic Burleson said. Other charges may be filed later, he said, depending on the outcome of the invesigation by Detective Don Watson.

Saucier was remanded to the Hancock County Justice Facility Tuesday, and held on a $30,000 bond.

Saucier was out on bail after being arrested two weeks ago by officers of the Police Waveland Department, who charged him with a burglary at a doctor's officer. He was arrested near the scene in that incident.

An arraignment hearing on the latest charges was scheduled for after press time Wednesday.

aturday is the day set for Hancock Medical Center's big Community Health Fair from 9 a.m. to noon.

This is always a very important day for the community when they can receive some free health screenings, health information and lots of giveaways.

It is a family affair which includes many things for the younger generation. Special visitors will include the Sea Wolves Mascot, in addition to games, the Bay St. Louis Fire Department's "Smoke House," face painting, bicycle safety, etc.

As usual there will be things of interest for the older folks too, such as blood pressure and free bone density screenings, glucose and pulmonary tests, etc.

There will be refreshments too and possibly a snack or two.

Most important too is that the American Red Cross will be conducting a Blood Drive Saturday morning which will be hosted by Hancock Medical Center.

The self-contained trailer will be parked to the right of the hospital entrance and blood donations will be accepted from 9 a.m. to 1

All blood types are needed, especially O negative and O positive. Donors will received a free T-shirt as a thank you for giving blood. I hope to see you at the Community Health Fair and Blood Drive Saturday.

In-depth articles in two major newspapers have raised those questions. Published reports showed that Bush was given a commission as an officer in the Texas Air Guard just 12 days before his college deferment was due to expire. That kept him out of the draft.

The Boston Globe's exhaustive probe showed Bush somehow skipped more than a year of fulfilling his National Guard service. When he was supposed to be on his 180-day training at Maxwell Air Force base in Montgomery, AL, say printed accounts, Bush spent most of his time working for an Alabama candidate, Republican Winton "Red" Blount.

Of course, it didn't hurt at all that at the time he got a slot in the Texas Air Guard in 1968, Bush's father was the U.S. Congressman who represented the Houston area. And his grandfather, distinguished Connecticut GOP U.S. Sen. Prescott Bush, had just stepped down from the Senate to resume his career as a prominent Wall Street financier.

an energy deficit that could be very risky, considering the questionable nations we are buying from. Two dollar-per-gallon gas prices may become normal or, worse yet, cheap. While the demand for clean burning natural gas is expected to double in the next 20 years, without a national energy policy, domestic production is expected to grow only 14 percent, leaving our nation with a 36 percent energy deficit, just in this one cate-

Yet, unlike other deficits. America's energy deficit can be easily solved if we have the willpower. I'm not talking about outlawing SUVs, giving up your bass boat or installing solar panels on your roof.

Folks should not be expected to do that, and they will not do that. I'm talking about practical solutions such as incentives for more domestic oil and gas production in the immediate future - enough to keep our nation from becoming any more dependent for oil on nations like Saudi Arabia or Iran.

are you will come across one ically for the operation of soof 2,400 oil or gas wells in called marginal wells like our state. Sometimes the wells may be pumping, sometimes not, and sometimes you'll see wells that are capped. That's because we don't currently have an energy policy that encourages maximum domestic oil and gas production. When the prices are down, these small wells - often called "marginal wells"- are inactive. The oil and gas below them stays there because there is little incentive to get it out. The Energy Policy Act of 2003 will change that by providing tax incentives for those in Mississippi. The bill also calls for more domestic production in general, like in the Gulf of Mexico. This means more domestic product in our reserves, less dependance on foreign nations, and more jobs here at home possibly even increasing the 20,000 petroleum-related jobs already in Mississippi.

This national energy policy will call for research into alternative fuels and alternative energy sources which include solar power, wind power and even biomass fuels extracted from animal domestic production, specif- and vegetative waste - a technology under experimentation in Mississippi. We should assume that alternative fuels and energy generation techniques will one day replace fossil fuels.

Fuels that burn clean include new technologies and some old ones.

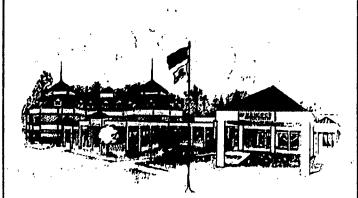

Clean-burning nuclear power, like that produced at the Grand Gulf facility near Port Gibson, hydro power, and new technologies allowing the clean burning of coal must remain a staple in America's energy diet if we are to continue meeting our growing energy needs, particularly in terms of electrical power demands.

America's energy needs are growing and so is our dependence on foreign nations for energy.

I hope the Senate will adopt a national energy policy that includes both incentives for domestic production and for new technologies. If not, America soon faces a severe energy deficit that arguably has more serious consequences than any shortage we have ever faced.

(Parenthetically, Al Gore, Bush's presidential opponent in 2000, was a Harvard honor graduate in 1970 when he enlisted as an Army private, despite the fact his father, longtime Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore, opposed the war in Vietnam. The younger Gore was sent by the Army to an engineering brigade near Saigon to serve as its reporter, both in and out of combat before his Vietnam tour ended.)

My affection for aircraft carriers came from my World War II Navy duty in the Pacific on board the destroyer Stephen Potter. Our type ships were known as the "small boys," in the task force, given the job of screening the fast aircraft carriers, plucking their downed pilots out of the sea and helping to guard them from enemy attack.

My ship was proud of having shot down nine Japanese planes headed toward the carriers. But on May 11, 1945, when two Kamikazes dove out of a massive anti-aircraft barrage and smashed into the flight deck of our favorite carrier, the Bunker Hill, we were deeply saddened.

One of the suicide planes had torn through the flight deck and ignited thousands of gallons of high-octane aircraft fuel, incinerating dozens of crewmen and forcing hundreds to jump off the ship's fantail into the sea.

We maneuvered as close as we could to the burning vessel to recover any survivors we could find. By dark, we had picked up 100 enlisted men and seven officers, some of them terribly burned. We bedded them down as best we could in our already-cramped quarters. and Dr. Bill Delaney, pressing some us into duty to help him, cared for the burned and injured.

In later years, some of the Bunker Hill survivors we brought aboard poured out their gratitude to our crew members for saving their

In early 1944 our newlyformed Task Force 58 made a surprise attack on the Central Pacific Japanese stronghold at Truk. As we retired from the area, out of the blackened night a torpedo launched by a Japanese bomber came coursing towards the Potter.

Our beloved skipper, Comdr. Charles Crichton spotted it and sent the message to the crew: "Stand by to take torpedo on the port side."

A sickening swishing sound was heard from under our ship. A few moments later we heard the thud of the torpedo hitting the aircraft carrier Intrepid's starboard quarter, smashing into the steering engine room. She was left dead in the water.

The Potter was nearest Intrepid, and we along with another destroyer, quickly stood by the crippled flattop until she managed to regain steerage.

Detached from the rest of the fleet, we accompanied the Intrepid for temporary refueling at the forward area anchorage in the Marshall Islands, then shepherded the carrier nearly 1000 miles back to Pearl Harbor.

Anytime thereafter that we saw the Intrepid, the Potter crew looked wistfully upon the aircraft carrier, realizing she took the torpedo that appeared to have the Potter's name on it.

There's a slogan, "Don't mess with Texas." I feel that way about aircraft carriers when anyone messes with them.

Mississippi Highway Patrol focuses on seat belt safety

Officers educate Bay High students about dangers of not wearing seat belts

David Kenny, the assistant troop commander and accident reconstructionist with the Mississippi Highway Patrol, based this prediction on statistics.

He and fellow officer Sgt. Joe Gazzo used statistics and personal experiences to educate the juniors and seniors about seat belt safety.

"Random seat belt checks indicate the motoring public is low in seat belt usage in Mississippi," Kenny said. "Our target goal is 100 percent seat belt usage in the state; we hope to cut fatalities by 75 per-

To help meet this goal, Kenny organized a pilot program designed to reduce fatalities through seat belt education, which is currently being targeted at ninth through 12th graders. Kenny made his first presentation at Biloxi High last week; Bay High was his second stop.

The idea for this program originated last month during a Mississippi Highway Patrol district meeting.

Kenny asked other officers how many automobile accident-related fatalities they had worked so far this vear. The answer was 16. He then asked how many could have been prevented if the victims had worn their seat belts. Kenny discovered that 10 people would have lived had they worn their seat

Pass student receives AATF French award

Association of Teachers of French (AATF) recently announced that Jennifer Ladner, a senior at Pass Christian High School, has received an AATF Outstanding High School Senior in French Award.

This award is made annually to a graduating senior who has demonstrated excellence in the study of French as well as exceptional commitment to the French language and the many cultures where it is spoken. Recipients must have completed at least three years of French study at the American time of graduation and be non-native speakers of French.

Jennifer has travelled abroad. She is President of the French Club and a member of the French National Honor Society. She has also participated in National French Week activities. Jennifer has studied French for three years and is the student of Linda M. Jordan.

The AATF was founded in 1927 and has as its mission the promotion of the study of French language and French-speaking literatures and cultures at all levels.

more upgrades to the Pass would be putting a parking Christian Harbor.

The low level of appropriation to the Bay St. Louis project may well shelve any chance that a controversial parking deck at the Rutherford Pier would advance soon, even if City Council were to endorse such a plan. The city has some $400,000 bankrolled in storms — and probably from the past two years' of Tidelands appropriations, and had hoped for a sizeable allocation this year to put with it to make some substantial upgrades to the 1.000-foot long pier at Ulman Street.

At a 5:30 p.m. meeting Monday, representatives of Brown and Mitchell Engineering are expected to give Bay St. Louis City Council members estimates of how much it will cost to add various amenities to the pier — including a very controversial parking deck on stilts over the beach,

"That sounds to me like one of the stupidest ideas I've heard of in a long time," says Henry "Mack" McGee. He's a board member of a beachfront neighborhood association, with over 200 members in Bay St. Louis and Waveland.

And the Hancock County Historical Society, with 400 to 600 members, has had a lot of rumblings in the ranks over the idea as well. "The Historical Society has no official position, although we have great concerns anytime anything is going to affect the historical aspects of the city we are trying to preserve," said Brehm Bell, immediate past president of the society.

Both men say their groups are worried that a beachfront parking facility would spoil the vista along the waterfront.

Another who's anxiously waiting to see the proposal is Nikki Nicholson, the new owner of the beachfront Bay Town Inn Bed & Breakfast. "My initial inclination is to Department of Marine the beach," she said. McGee questions whether such a facility even meets the criteria for spending Tidelands money.

Downtown merchants long have begged City Council to boost parking facilities in the beach area commercial district. Brown & Mitchell was commissioned by the city several years ago to study that study's recommendations.

Recently, the firm was Fund allocations.

deck on support pilings near the Rutherford Pier, featuring elevated angled parking off Beach Boulevard. In a previous study. Mitchell's firm advised that building a surface parking lot on the beach would be outrageously expensive, subject to almost certain destruction impossible to build because state officials wouldn't issue permits for it.

He also said last month, however, that whatever the city does with its state allocations will have to be built in proximity to the existing pier, perhaps no further away than Demontluzin Street. That likely precludes building a surface parking lot off the beach, he said, because the city would have to buy an existing building and demolish it to make room for a parking facility.

While those questions close to the Rutherford pier. hang in the air, some area officials are befuddled by the way the Tidelands Trust Fund bill was put together enacted by the and Tidelands Legislature. Funds are the state receipts from leases of bottomlands casinos are the main source because the gambling barges float offshore over state-owned lands.

Bay St. Louis has spent over $1 million in prior Tidelands allocations that funded construction of the pier and a new restroom facility. They asked for another $300,000 to expand the pier's amenities, including its parking.

Officials said they wanted to re-stripe and enlarge its existing parking bays, install curbs, gutters, sidewalks and drainage flumes, and "construct additional parking areas on the water side of Beach Boulevard, where feasible.'

For fiscal 2004, a fixed set of regulations gave officials in the coastal counties a chance to ask the a deadline in 2002 to file applications. A "Merit Committee" was to go over the details of those applications, and prioritize what would be asked of the Legislature.

Then, in January, the Legislature was to take the DMR request and act on it.

It's not clear what DMR's Merit Committee did with the Bay's $300,000 request, but the state House of Representatives' bill on the matter showed the Bay with only $150,000 in the hopper. By the time the measure went through the Senate, the $150,000 was intact. When the bill emerged from a conference committee, the however, Legislature's 11th hour,

Garber asked that anyone with information concern-

$50,000.

How that final cut was made remains a mystery.

One member of the conference committee that cobbled together the final version was Sen. Scottie Cuevas, D-Hancock and Harrison counties. He said he was tossed onto the committee a mere 15 minutes before the bill was to die for lack of sufficient signatures. He says he's ashamed to admit it, but he didn't have time to read the bill, before agreeing to its provisions.

Cuevas wasn't even supposed to be on the conference committee. He said he was abruptly "thrown" into the final negotiation only after Sen. Tommy Gollot, D-Harrison and Jackson counties, refused to sign off on the bill. Another conferee was nowhere to be found when it came time to finalize its details, Cuevas said.

Gollot's refusal, said Cuevas, came because Gollot was upset that some of the money Gollot wanted to include in the Pass Christian appropriation had been refused by Pass officials. Gollot was not immediately available for comment.

But Pass Mayor Billy McDonald said Tuesday he indeed had balked at a request that the Pass seek money for a public hoist facility that had been sought by some Biloxi fishermen. McDonald said Gollot didn't contact him personally about the matter, but that DMR chief of staff Joe Zeigler did.

McDonald said he balked at the idea, posed of behalf of some Biloxi oyster fishermen, to build a new, free, public hoist facility that would compete with three existing, private enterprise, firms which sell their hoist services at the Harbor.

"I met with Joe Zeigler and explained to him we're not going to get into competition" with those enterprises, said McDonald, noting that they pay rent to Pass be against it. I think it Resources for specific levels Christian. "As long as I'm would destroy the beauty of of project funding, meeting mayor, it's not going to happen. We're not going into competition with private enterprise." Aside from the hoist issue, the Pass was pushed to build fish-cleaning benches in their facility an amenity many oppose,

Sen. Cuevas said that position by the Pass mayor led to Gollot's refusal to sign the conference bill. The powerful Biloxi legislator's family is in the seafood industry.

Indeed, the $200,000 that the House and Senate had approved for the Pass Harbor disappeared entirely from a revised version of the bill that the Senate approved. Conferees later stuck $200,000 back into the legislation, without Gollot's okay.

Rep. Diane Peranich, D-

sheriff's department at 467-

Pass Christian, was a House conferee instrumental in restoring that funding. She said the final process took place amid tremendous last-minute contention. McDonald said his city would use the $200,000 to continue the massive waterfront upgrades it has made in the Harbor in recent years - but without building a public hoist facility. In any case, two Harrison County supervisors came up with $10,000 to modify a wall in the harbor slightly, allowing fishermen to hoist their catches directly to waiting trucks, if they don't want to sell directly through the harbor-based enterpris-

McDonald said everyone seems satisfied with that solution at this point, including Zeigler.

Meanwhile, other area governments scored well in new Tidelands funding measure. Hancock County got $200,000 for its plans to enhance facilities at the Washington Street Pier it. leases from the American Legion. Plans for that pier include building a restroom facility and extending the pier, according to documents filed with DMR.

The actual appropriation outcome caught some Hancock officials off-guard — even the county engineer was unaware this week that any money had been appropriated for the project.

For Waveland, a $200,000 grant was $50,000 less than the city requested. In its application, city officials said they want to extend the pier by 200 feet, add guardrails and build an extra covered pagoda.

Meanwhile, county officials say a $100,000 appropriation for McLeod Water Park will finance construction of a building there that park commissioners can use for their meetings, and to store maintenance equipment.

Another Tideland grant went to fund a $100,000 extension to the Hancock County's Pearlington Pier.

Cuevas wanted to emphasize that while Bay St. Louis "got the short end of the stick," the county overall fared well in the new Tidelands appropriations. And, he noted there are no casinos in Hancock County contributing lease money to the Tidelands pool. Casino Magic's barge floats on privately owned waters.

Cuevas said that the last time he'd seen the legislation in the Senate, before the conference committee action, it had $150,000 for the Bay St. Louis project. Cuevas said that faced with his last-minute assignment to the conference committee, he faced a situation of "either sign the bill, or it died. "I didn't even have time to look at it, I hate to tell you." Asked if Gollot jiggled the final numbers in the committee, conference Cuevas said: "I know he did.

He was the lead conferee." Gollot and DMR chief of staff Zeigler were not reached for comment. State Rep. J. P. Compretta also was not reached for comment.

Bay St. Louis Mayor Eddie Favre, meanwhile, says he plans to make a case for more money from the DMR Commission. The authorizes legislation DMR's commission to dole out any "excess" Tidelands Funds it has, up to $800,000, to supplement projects, and pay for administrative costs.

Carriere receives tourism award

Mississippi Gulf Coast Golf Association (MGCGA) has announced a new award to recognize tourism leaders and organizations that show outstanding support for the golfing industry in Hancock, Harrison and Jackson coun-

Commission, Mississippi Development

Authority/Tourism and the Jackson County Chamber of Commerce will receive awards in MGCGA's inaugural 2003 presentation.

Golf tourism has an estimated $40 million économic impact on the Mississippi Gulf Coast, according to Kevin Drum, MGCGA's executive director. The Golf Tourism Award will be given annually to honor superior effort to increase golf's economic impact in South Mississippi.

'We are very fortunate that Hancock County Tourism's Beth Carriere. Darien Wilson and the staff of Mississippi's Tourism office, and Terry Carter of Jackson County Chamber filled a funding vacuum at a time when the Gulf Coast golf community really needed their support," Drum said. "Formal award presentations will be made later this month." He explained that 2002 was challenging for local golf marketing because a Broadwater Biloxi The funding source that former Oaks Golf Club in Pass ly spent up to $250,000 Christian and St. Andrews

"In their willingness to fill the funding vacuum, our winners ${f three}$ award showed themselves as more than friends of golf," Drum Hancock County Tourism said. "They demonstrated their understanding of the economic impact tourism has on area hotels, restaurants, casinos and retailers."

Members of MGCGA's Golf Marketing Committee determined the honorees, based on the following crite-

Exceptional dedication to increasing golf tourism in that calendar year or in lifetime achievement:

Taking action to increase golf tourism on the entire Mississippi Gulf Coast, not just his/her property or group. Basically taking on the attitude that "no one wins unless we all win."

Where the properties' or organizations' support was pivotal for success in the past calendar year or lifetime achievement.

Marketing Committee members are from three hotels-Casino Magic Bay Saint Louis, Isle of Capri and Holiday Inns Gulfport/Biloxi-and three golf courses, President annually to lure golfers to Golf Club in Jackson the Coast ended its golf County.

Parents ask Roxanne Cavataio, licensed clinical social worker-

"How can I help my teenager cope with frustration?"

There are many simple but effective coping techniques you can teach your kids. One of them is decreasing negative self talk. For example saying to yourself, "There is nothing to look forward to" can really get your mood down. Instead, try saying something more optimistic like "Maybe I don't see anything exciting in my future now, but I bet there are ways I could make things exciting if I try." You will feel calmer and less anxious. With a little practice, your teen can acquire this skill. We'd like to help you; if you want more information, call us now or anytime. There's always a counselor standing by to talk with you.

In an effort to remember America and the military during this time of crisis, Our Lady Academy's Campus Ministry Council collected all the names of the faculty's and students' relatives and friends who have been deployed since Christmas. First, they created a book of all the names and information, presented it in a special prayer service, and placed it on a special table in the main entrance. Then, they created a "freedom wall, in the courtyard, listing all the women and men and the available information on a red, white and blue banner, decorated the poles with American Flags, and added a Pepsi banner which reads "God Bless America.'

Hancock Medical Center's smoking cessation program tobacco use is the single greatest cause of preventable illness and death in the United States. Hancock Medical Center recently established a smoking cessation team to educate smokers on the dangers of tobacco products.

Tobacco users are identified upon admission to Hancock Medical Center. Registered nurses and team members Laurie Henry and Barbara Boston advise the patient to quit and offer available resources to help them succeed.

Thomas Moore, 35, smoked for 20 years prior to his initial counseling session. During a recent stay at Hancock Medical Center, he Evidence shows that received a visit from the smoking cessation team. Along with Moore's physi- ${ m Dr.}$ Roberta cian Chilimigras, the team designed a cessation plan that best fit Moore's needs.

"I like the advice and follow-up that I've received with this program," Moore said. "it really helps to know that someone is there to help you."

Unlike Moore, who previously had never seriously considered quitting smoking, many severely compromised cardiac and pulmonary patients often continue smoking because they have been unsuccessful before, are afraid to try, or do not believe they can quit. William Baudoin, 50, has been a smoker for more than 25 years, Four years ago, he quit smoking for more than two years. Baudoin, like many smokers who have tried to quit, noticed a significant weight gain after quitting, so he started smoking again. Following his stay at Hancock Medical Center, Baudoin received information on the smoking cessation program. He and his wife have stopped smoking and feel that this time it will be suc-

A great alternative

The Bay St. Louis School District formally dedicated Tetah Hall as the district's site for its alternative school on Wednesday. The building, formally the site of Christ Episcopal elementary school, became the new location for the alternative school last fall. Until then, students with behavioral difficulties had to be sent out of district.

Six faculty members work with about 40 permanent students and 15 temporary students enrolled in grades six through twelve. Tetah Hall was originally erected in 1950 and served as a church day school. It was remodeled through a grant from the Collins Diboli Foundation and dedicated to the memory of Francs Louise Diboli Chesworth, family, Roy, Kyle Seage performed a affectionately called dedication prayer.

If you are one who enjoys taking in the sights and smells of a Southern garden afterhours, consider one of the most spectacular vines available, the moonflower.

The moonflower is related to the morning glory and originates from tropical America. It is the kind of plant that makes memories for your children. It is an heirloom, or antique, vine grown in the South that all children, and adults for that matter, need to experience.

Large, pristine, white, fragrant flowers open in the late afternoon or early evening and reflect moonlight all night long. This nightly occurrence happens from mid-summer through

If you are fortunate, a luna moth will visit, making the whole experience one to reminisce about with the family.

It is time to start thinking about growing the moonflower at your home. Select a site in full sun, even though it is the moon that will show it off. When writing "Mississippi Gardener's Guide," I suggested selecting a site in full moonlight, but the editor didn't let it pass.

The soil should be fertile and organic-rich, so amend with 3 to 4 inches of compost or humus. Incorporate a cup of 5-10-5 fertilizer when preparing the site.

Transplants aren't available at all garden centers, but seeds are easy to find. Seeds can be started in a container or planted at the site. Scratch the seed coat with sandpaper lightly a few, times, and then soak the seeds overnight.

Plant seeds one-half inch deep next to a sturdy structure for climbing. Believe me, these guys can really climb -- they are capable of reaching 15 to 30 feet.

Keep the moonflower watered through the summer and feed every four to six weeks with a light application of a slow-release 12-6-6 fertilizer. Should the vine get too vigorous, pinch or prune to keep confined.

Occasionally spider mites become a problem, so pay attention and treat early if needed.

Plant the moonflower where the family can enjoy it. Since it is showiest at night, combine it with something colorful for the daytime, such as its cousin, the morning glory, or the pink 'Alice du Pont' mandevilla.

At our home we created a "24-hour trellis." One side

Each year, the parishes of St. Ann's and St. John's Catholic churches host the five-day Triduum to the Holy Infant of Good Health, concluding celebrations with a Feast Day celebration and Mexican fiesta.

The Clermont Harbor pilgrimage and feast day sprang from a tradition that began in Morelia, Mexico and was imported to Hancock County in the late 1990s by locals Yvonne and Phillip Garcia.

The Morelian tradition started in 1938, when people began attributing amazing cures and recoveries from illness to a small wooden image of the Infant Jesus, which was venerated in the home of Rosa Maria Guadalupe Calderon. The statue was dubbed Santo Niño de la Salud, the Holy Infant of Good Health.

On April 12, 1942, the Archbishop of Morelia approved private devotion to it, and in 1944, the Infant's status was "crowned," and public devotion was approved.

The St. Stanislaus Rocka-chaws had one of their best overall finishes in recent history at the state track meet held last Friday at Hughes Field in Jackson.

SSC placed seventh overall and brought home four medals in the competition. Oxford and Port Gibson tied for the state title with 98 points. They were followed by Pearl with 58 points, Grenada 43, Bailey Magnet 41, Jackson Provine 37, SSC 35, McComb 32.5, Picayune 30. Quitman and Louisville 23, Clarksdale 17, and Poplarville with 14 points.

SSC head coach Steve commented. Flannery "Overall, I am really proud of how the team members finished the season. The finish was not as high as I figured it would be heading into the state meet; however, it was a better finish than last season. By any measure, it has been an out-. standing season."

Nick Weinmann, a junior discus thrower, placed eighth with a throw of 126'9". Troy Johnston, a sophomore distance runner, placed eighth in the 3200m run. Jake Johnson, a pole vaulter, finished sixth overall with a personal best of Frederick Mallini, a senior shot-putter, medaled in third place with a put of 48'. Allen Leone, a senior middle distance runner, brought home the silver medal in the 800m with a time of 2:00.08. Leone was closing on the leader as he crossed the line but ran out of real estate.

Kyle Lewis, a junior middle-distance and long-distance runner, brought home a silver medal in the 3200m and a bronze medal in the 1600m runs. His times were 9:59.00 and 4:32.00, respectively. Lewis also placed seventh in the 800m run with a time of 2:05.

Lewis led the entire way in the 3200m and was beaten down the final stretch by Oxford's Cyrus Wakaba with a time of 9:58. Wakaba won the 3200m, 1600m, and 800m runs. It was the first time that feat was accomplished at the state track meet since St. Stanislaus' Brian Brooks brought home all three titles in 1991.

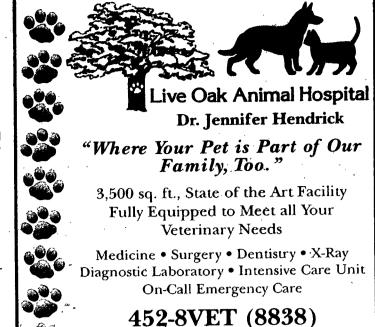

Wakaba had times of 4:29.61 and 1:58.92 in the 1600m and 800m, respectively.

Flannery stated, "I am thrilled for Allen Leone. He ran an outstanding and gutsy final race in his high school career. I am disappointed that Kyle Lewis was unable to pull off a state title today but I am still very proud of how he ran his races. He stuck to his strategy which was to go out fast and try and break Cyrus (Wakaba). But, he just wasn't going to break today. He got Kyle (Lewis) on the home stretch and we knew he had a good kick in him. Kyle (Lewis) came back strong in the 1600m and tied a personal best. He will have a good senior season next year. I am very excited for Fred Mallini and his medal performance. He has worked very hard to achieve what has been his focus all year long. Physically, he has been the smallest competitior in each meet in the shot put. But, his dedication to technique formation and the sport itself has been tremendous. He proved that he is one of the best in the state. The Bay High Tigers 4x400m relay team of Lamier, Norman Wilkes. and Monroe Jordan placed fifth in the state meet with a time of 3:29.00.

-Some 100 construction and labor representatives assembled at the Markham Hotel, Gulfport, yesterday to begin two days of meetings to work out advance agreements on wages, hours and conditions to prevail during construction of the Mississippi Test Operations in Hancock County scheduled to commence soon. The meeting was called at the request of the President's Missile Site Labor Committee and is the first time the federal government has sponsored such a meeting prior to awarding construction contracts. Ultimate cost of MTO is expected to be $500 million, and its construction "is on a very tight schedule," according to Capt. William C.
